“ Right after I got remarried to a 100% German wife I brought her to one of the German picnics. When I introduced Gabriela to Adi, as Gabriela stated in her note, the cross examination and interrogation began. And I didn't understand a single word since it was all in German. She passed with flying colors, After that I discussed the Pythagorean theorem with the former math teacher and we were good to go :-)

“ I remember hearing stories from Adi and his brothers from my Husband Scott Dickson. Born and raised in Germany myself I knew we had lots in common. I recall being at the German Picnic, when I noticed a gentleman eagerly coming in for approach. Later I found out it was Adi. He was determined to see if I was a real German. He then proceeded with talking German to me. And I answered back in my native German tongue with a Bavarian accent. He proceeded to look at Scott with a big smile on his face and stated, " By God she is a true German ". We had a good laugh. I so enjoyed his stories from Germany and the US. He had one heck of an adventure. Something we have in common besides the language. I will miss you, Adi. Thank you for the laughter. RIP Adi. God must have needed another German Angel. You won't ever be forgotten.

“ Adi, dancing to Bumble Boogie with you was a lovely and amazing thing. I'll always remember your good humor and sweet nature. Miss you, Wednesday nights haven't been the same.
