“ Oh, Grandma. I don't even know where to start.. She was always the rock of our family. She reminded us that we are supposed to love each other through everything. That everyone plays a special part in our family, and we should cherish and love each other. She was the most selfless person that I've ever known. She'd give up her last dollar if it meant that she could help out someone that she loved. She would travel miles on the bus just to spend time with family, because that's what she loved to do. She didn't mind the bus ride though, because it meant that she could read her book and have some "me" time. She really enjoyed little things like that. I always told her that I wanted to put her in a nice house with a big back yard where she could watch her Grand babies play. She would tell me that she was perfectly happy here. That it didn't matter if we have nice things. She got to be surrounded by family, relax, and watch her tv shows. That's all she ever wanted.. and that's something that I will miss about her. She enjoyed the little things. Like eating way too much dessert and over stuffing herself. She reallyyy loved her cooking/baking and wasn't afraid to tell anyone all about it. She'd do taste tests while she was cooking and say "Mmm mmm." Smile to herself, and then giggle. Man, do I miss her laugh. It was so beautiful and contagious. I'd sit in my room and just hear her laughing at her tv shows, or with Nova. They sure were the cutest. It didn't matter what Gigi was saying or doing, she could always bring out Nova's big smiles and belly laughs. Nothing melted my heart more than watching them together. It's a bond that can never be broken. I thanked her countless times for everything that she did for Nova and I, and she would just say "Of course babe. I love my sugar babies." She never wanted me to feel like I couldn't ask her for help. I'm so thankful for that. And I can never thank her enough for the wonderful memories that we have together. We became so much closer over the last couple of years, and I'll cherish that time forever. From going to the farmer's market, going to the library, and going to the zoo, we were always out on some kind of adventure when we weren't at home relaxing. My heart is broken now that you're gone, but knowing that you are at peace and with the love of your life again gives me happiness. It's helping me heal. You may be in Heaven now, but your legacy will live on. And your family will be missing you more than words can say. I used to say "Goodnight Grandma, I love you. See you in the morning." And she would say it back. But until we meet again, I'll say "Goodnight Grandma, I love you. I'll see you when it's my time to come home."

“ Grandma Gloria was so kind and loved everyone no matter what your story was. She may not have been my grandma but that didn't matter she has always been grandma Gloria . She watched me grow up and was always so kind . She was such a stiring woman. Just a year ago when Jamie and I were pregnant we went shopping and refused to let us carry any of the heavy bags. That's just one small thing out of millions that she had done for her family and friends. She loved her family more than anything and it showed by the way she looked at the ones she loved. This may have been unexpected but she loved andived her life to the fullest. She loved you guys with every ounce of her. Heaven gaine an incredibly strong and loving woman and she will be missed.
