

Maddie Christine Davis

September 20, 1998 - October 9, 2025

With hearts in pieces, our family is grieving the loss of Madeline Christine Davis, 27, a beautiful mother, daughter, sister, aunt, niece, cousin, co-parent, and friend. After a period of struggle, Maddie died by suicide.

Maddie grew up in Oregon City in a very close family: her parents Candy and Adam, her big brother Mason, and her big sister Marissa. She loved being outdoors—camping with family, fishing, boating, and hunting—and she carried that grounded, Pacific Northwest joy into everyday life. She was strong and spunky, deeply organized, warm, and kind. The one who noticed small details and made people feel seen.

Maddie’s greatest joy was being “Mama” to Raeanne Christine (2) and Warren Boyd (1). She shared that world with their dad, Cameron Davis, who is now caring for their little ones. More than anything, Maddie wanted her children to feel deeply loved and they did, every single day.

Professionally, Maddie was a talented lead stylist and a trusted, steady presence for her cousin Sydney Bray’s company, LiveEdge Salon + Spa. She served on the LiveEdge committee that helped shape and grow the company, and she was Sydney’s right hand with inventory and products. Her life was so much fuller than work—but her talent, leadership, and reliability touched many. She is a light in their space that they will miss every day.

Maddie also lived with significant mental health challenges, and this past year brought heavy life changes. She was actively trying to get better, and it is heartbreaking that her journey ends here. We're sharing this because honesty reduces stigma and might help someone else feel less alone. Our love for Maddie is boundless, and our grief is too. She was so much more than her struggle.

Maddie is survived by her beautiful children, Raeanne (Bug) and Warren (Bubba) Davis, and their father Cameron Davis, her parents Adam and Candice Donovan, her brother Mason Roberts and his partner Rachel Hubbard, her sister Marissa Donovan and brother-in-law Komail Ahmadyar, and her grandparents, Wade Donovan, John & Jane Straight, and Paula Roberts.

“ I wanted to share that although I only had the pleasure of knowing the essence that presented as Maddie a short period of time, I feel honored and blessed that our paths crossed and that I got to experience her knowledge and beauty of the world. Her viewpoints and advice, her insight and outlook on things we discussed. She impacted my life, inspired me, reminded me of how we are all ultimately connected. Her purpose and light were her own and so unique to this world. To those who knew her well, her family , children and close friends....I send to you prayers of healing and divine love to wrap your hearts in, until the day that you feel her again. In the rain, or the wind or the songs you hear...she is there just waiting to touch each of you again in only the way she can...she is never gone, she is just a realm away...always within reach when you remember her with the love and light that connects us all . It is an honor to celebrate her with all those who loved her most.
