“ I have known Olie for more than 50 years. I worked with him in church youth groups for many years and we became great friends. I am sorry that we were unable to connect face-to-face during the last many years.

My condolences go out to his sister, Jeannie, and to his mom.

“ I am a lawyer in Seattle, and I worked with Olie on several occasions. I was devastated to hear of his untimely passing. Olie was liked and respected by everyone in the insurance and legal community in the Pacific Northwest. He was kind, smart, honest, and decent.

He was not only good at his job, but also took time to make people feel appreciated. For example, after he worked with a couple of my colleagues, he took the time to send a note to me, telling me how much he enjoyed working with our lawyers and how well they treated him. Most experts, and people in the legal world generally, would never take time for this type of kindness. But that was Olie.

I hope that memories of Olie will be a comfort and blessing to his family.

“ I had the privilege of knowing Olie for the past 20 to 25 years, due to our mutual employment in the insurance industry. Back when he lived in Texas, we would often talk by phone about insurance and claim issues. He was an extremely astute individual. Later, our paths intersected when we each became expert witnesses specializing in insurance.

Some of my early cases involved Olie being the expert on the opposing side. Nevertheless, we shared a common interest and passion in all things insurance. He became a member of a professional organization of expert witnesses and consultants, AAIMCo, and then we increased the frequency of our phone contacts in sharing common problems and situations.

I am heartbroken to hear of his passing because not only was he extremely knowledgeable about insurance, but a very good guy. He will be missed -- not just for his professional contributions but for the person that he was! My condolences to Dana and Olie's family.

“ I got to know Olie through the American Association of Insurance Management Consultants (AAIMCo) and last saw him in San Diego at our annual conference. He was a well-respected professional in the insurance industry and a friend to many of us. My heart goes out to family at this difficult time with prayers for strength and comfort.
